

Wisconsin

Racial Representation Of the voting population of 2,598,607, 5.1% are black and 3.5% are Latino. There are currently no blacks or Latinos representing Wisconsin. Under the proposed super districting plan, black voters in Super District A supporting a candidate with crossover appeal could elect a candidate of choice in coalition with other minority and white voters.

Political Analysis In the 2000 Presidential election, Al Gore won Wisconsin with 47.8% of the vote over George W. Bush's 47.6%. The state's overall Democratic partisanship is 49.4%. Under the current eight-district system, four districts can be considered Republican, two can be considered Democratic, and two can be considered competitive. Under the proposed super districting plan, voters would likely elect three Democrats and three Republicans with two swing seats.

This proposal is based on the current congressional districts of Wisconsin. Because current congressional districts are often the results of gerrymandering, the proposed super district boundaries are not as smooth and nice-looking as they could be in a similar proposal that made use of sub-congressional district data.
